Do you have any information about this site? Could the "recent" use of the facilities be to isolate service members returning from West Africa to prevent spread of the Ebola virus?

Thank you.

A chance you could track this down to see if it is the site?

Col. James Gallivan, commander, 402nd Field Artillery Brigade, addresses Soldiers who supported Operation United Assistance as they prepare to leave the controlled monitoring site at Fort Bliss, Dec. 9, 2014. Fort Bliss is one of three installations designated by the Department of Defense to host a 21-day controlled monitoring site for service members returning from West Africa in an effort to prevent the Ebola virus from being introduced stateside.
